the idea that home is a special place a separate place a place where we can be our true selves is so obvious to us today that we barely pause to think about it but as judith flanders shows in this revealing book home is a relatively new concept when in 1900 dorothy assured the citizens of oz that there is no place like home she was expressing a view that was a culmination of 300 years of economic physical and emotional change in the making of home flanders traces the evolution of the house across northern europe and america from the sixteenth to the early twentieth century and paints a striking picture of how the homes we know today differ from homes through history the transformation of houses into homes she argues was not a private matter but an essential ingredient in the rise of capitalism and the birth of the industrial revolution without home the modern world as we know it would not exist and as flanders charts the development of ordinary household objects from cutlery chairs and curtains to fitted kitchens plumbing and windows she also peels back the myths that surround some of our most basic assumptions including our entire notion of what it is that makes a family as full of fascinating detail as her previous bestsellers the making of home is also a book teeming with original and provocative ideas how do historians make sense of the spatial layeredness of the past cyrus schayegh argues that the modern world s ultimate socio spatial feature is not the oft studied processes of globalization or state formation or urbanization but rather the fast paced mutually transformative intertwinements of cities regions states and global circuits this book provides a new approach to the historical treatment of indigenous peoples sovereignty and property rights in australia and new zealand by shifting attention from the original european claims of possession to a comparison of the ways in which british players treated these matters later bain attwood not only reveals some startling similarities between the australian and new zealand cases but revises the long held explanations of the differences he argues that the treatment of the sovereignty and property rights of first nations was seldom determined by the workings of moral principle legal doctrine political thought or government policy instead it was the highly particular historical circumstances in which the first encounters between natives and europeans occurred and colonisation began that largely dictated whether treaties of cession were negotiated just as a bitter political struggle determined the significance of the treaty of waitangi and ensured that native title was made in new zealand

this new textbook will provide students of criminology with a better understanding of criminal justice policy and in doing so offers a framework for analysing the social economic and political processes that shape its creation the book adopts a policy oriented approach to criminal justice connecting the study of criminology to the wider study of british government public administration and politics throughout the book the focus is on key debates and competing perspectives on how policy decisions are made recognising that contemporary criminal justice policymakers operate in a highly politicised public arena under the gaze of an ever increasing variety of groups organisations and individuals who have a stake in a particular policy issue the book explores how and why these people seek to influence policymaking it also recognises that criminal policy differs from other areas of public policy as policy decisions affect the liberty and freedoms of citizens throughout key ideas and debates are linked to wider sociology criminology and social policy theory key features include a foreword by tim newburn leading criminologist and author of criminology 2nd edition 2013 a critical and informed analysis of the concepts ideas and institutional practices that shape criminal justice policy making an exploration of the relationship between criminal justice and wider social policy a critical analysis of the debate about how and why behaviour becomes defined as requiring a criminal justice solution a range of case studies tasks seminar questions and suggested further readings to keep the student engaged this text is perfect for students taking modules in criminology criminal justice and social and public policy as well as those taking courses on criminal and administrative law
